Point Loma Naval Base – San Diego, CA Replacement

Project Highlights

Crystal Pacific supplied its popular Series 700 uPVC commercial vinyl window for a classified facility at the Point Loma Naval Base, near San Diego Harbor in California. The building, described as a modern day “technical lighthouse” for US Navy ships at sea, required a window system that would stand up to the damaging effects of incessant salt sea air and UV sunlight since it is located just 100 yards from the ocean. Crystal Pacific coordinated with the general contractor B3 Construction and naval base staff to specify the perfect insulated glass package for the project.

Besides the significant challenge of providing materials to a secure military facility job site, the Navy also imposed an incredibly aggressive timeline for project completion, to which Crystal Pacific and the fenestration installer responded with “all hands on deck.” Crystal Pacific’s production team worked continuously to fabricate and deliver the new windows to meet the project schedule. The new windows were mullied onsite to form continuous horizontal ribbons spanning entire floors on the modernist style building, with extra-large openings for unobstructed views.
